KEY LEADERSHIP

American Prison Writing Archive (APWA), Co-Director and PI since 2021

The APWA is the largest and first fully searchable digital archive of non-fiction essays by imprisoned people writing about their experience inside U.S. prisons and jails today. The APWA currently hosts about 4000 essays from forty-seven states, four hundred prison facilities, and 1000+ authors. The archive now has submissions from 1800 authors with 6,268 essays in our physical holdings.

Through a grant from the Mellon Foundation Presidential Initiatives, we migrated the archive from its origin at Hamilton College to Johns Hopkins, where we have expanded our reach, impact, and ability to grow the archive, and continue to ensure incarcerated authors can document life inside and benefit materially from their writings. The Archive now has a staff of 8, supports 7 APWA fellows (formerly incarcerated authors), many student interns, and several advisors inside prison. We have helped forge a network of other prison archives through holding an Archives of Prison Witness convening in October 2024, bringing together over 100 people who lead organizations, archives, and community groups related to prison public memory projects to create a network and set of principles for ethical work with carceral archives. In addition to housing a public, searchable digital archive of over 4000 writings, the Archive has a forthcoming guest edited volume with Haymarket Press, featuring 49 incarcerated authors, Harm and Punishment, and has collaborated to bring APWA essays to a public audience through a commissioned original work and musical performance, “Songs from Inside”, with In the Stacks and the Peabody Institute. The Writing on the Wall (TWOTW), an artwork installation featuring writings from prisons around the world, was on display at the Hopkins Bloomberg Center in Washington, DC. during February and March 2025. A partnership between Incarceration Nations Network (INN) and the American Prison Writing Archive (APWA), this special edition of TWOTW installation sought to bring together visions from incarcerated authors around political life, democracy, disenfranchisement, and justice featuring a curated selection of writings from the APWA. Writings about the APWA can be found in Inquest, “A
